During the storm of last Wednesday afternoon lightning struck and set fire to the large barn of Leander Teaford's, in German township, and it was entirely consumed, together with several hundred bushels of wheat and oats, many tons of hay, farm implements, &c., entailing a loss of about $4500; partially insured.

The third annual meeting of the Darke County Pioneers was held at the fair grounds here on last Sunday and was attended by several hundred representative men and women from various parts of the county, including many aged and young from this city. A most interesting paper was read by J. T. Martz of this city, covering some of the early incidents and history of Darke county's progress and the building up of the present efficient school system, of which latter he was a factor. It was a most interesting reminiscent talk, one that highly delighted his large and attentive audience. Mrs. J. C. Turpen then related some incidents in her early life, speaking principally of the pioneer church and school days, some of her anecdotes bringing forth hearty peals of laughter. An interesting feature of the meeting was a reunion of the pupils who attended the Greenville schools between 1850 and 1860. Among those present were James McAlpin of Columbus, B. F. Howard of Tennessee, Americus Miesse of Lima, Chester Fletcher of Covington, Jennie Kitzmiller of Pi-qua, and from this city there were Mr. and Mrs. John C. Turpen, Taylor Dorman, Mr. and Mrs. John Jenks, Mrs. James Culbertson, Wils Arnold, James W. Martin. Little Miss Genevieve Myers in recitation and Mrs. Isaac Jay, an aged lady, in a select reading, added much to the entertaining program. The officers chosen for the ensuing year are: A. H. Gilbert, president; James W. Martin, secretary; F. Coppess, treasurer. It was decided to hold the next meeting at the same place on September 6, 1908.

Why She Was Indignant.
A little girl came home flushed with indignation because she had been "kept in" to correct her examples. "Mamma, I'll never speak to Jeanie Smith again as long as I live," she exclaimed.

"Why, what has Jeanie done to deserve that?"
"Because—well, because I copied all her arithmetic, and every sum of hers was wrong."

Well Educated.
We were trying to teach our little lad, aged five years, to speak well of the absent. At dinner he began to relate a personal encounter between himself and another little boy, and, seeing reproach on our faces, he halted for a minute and then resumed, with a deep sigh, "Well, mamma, Roy is a real strong boy"—another sigh—"and—he's got a good education!"

Why Tommy Was Good.
"Tommy," said the teacher, "you are a very good boy. You haven't missed a day at school this term. You never play sick on school days. I know."
"No, ma'am," returned Tommy. "I never did that but once, and I'll never do it again, because, while I ain't very fond of school, I like it a great sight better'n I do castor oil!"—Philadelphia Record.

Eggs That Jump.
Your friends will be mystified completely if you do this trick very carefully.

Take a number of eggs; remove the yolks and whites so that only the shells remain.
To each of these shells paste one end of a strand of fine silk, attach

THE TRICK EXPLAINED.
The other end to one of your fingers. Then place them in a shallow basket.

In doing the trick be sure that your audience are far enough away to be unable to see the silk threads.
Now say that you will be able to make the eggs leap into the air by magnetizing them with your fingers.
Of course, if you move a finger upward and downward, the shell attached to the other end of the strand of silk will move up and down. You can gain a pretty effect by making them dance in time to music.

Too Generous.
A railroad reporter declared in Upton Sinclair's hearing that freight rebates were sometimes granted purely out of generosity.

Mr. Sinclair, laughing, exclaimed: "Admit that to be true, and then your generosity is no better timed than Alkali Ike's."

"As he was peacefully eating his bear steak he heard a loud noise downstairs—a bang, an oath, two quick crashes, and then a bullet shot up through the floor and wounded the traveler in the leg.

"Putting down his knife and fork, he rose and began to hop about the room with loud groans. Suddenly the landlord burst into the room.

"What did that bullet go to?" the landlord exclaimed, laughing. "Oh, al ye hurt, stranger? Well, now, that's too bad! Ye see, Alkali Ike and Red Face Leary had an argument over their liquor down in the bar and fit it out fair and square. Red Face fired first and missed, and Ike—the all-fired generous cuss!—he fired in the air."

MAKING CHARCOAL.

Explanation of the Process of Turning Wood Into Carbon.

When we build a fire of wood we have nothing but a blaze and smoke and afterward ashes. Everything has disappeared into the air except a heap of grayish, powdery remains. How, then, do the charcoal burners manage to turn sticks of wood into sticks of carbon, with no ashes remaining? Did you ever hear an explanation of the process?

Small sticks of wood, uniform in length, are piled up in round heaps, with a hole in the middle for a chimney. Connected with that hole is another, which runs along the ground outside the heap so as to make a draft for the chimney. When the pile is completed the spaces between the sticks are filled with twigs and chips and even with leaves, so as to make the pile even, and then earth is thrown over it and sods put on the earth. Then fire is put at the bottom of the chimney, and by letting the heap have just enough air to keep the wood burning without blazing the sticks are charred without being consumed.

The philosophy of the process is this: Wood is made up chiefly of carbon, and it is that carbon that is to be preserved as charcoal. If, then, enough of the oxygen of the air be allowed to get to the wood to drive out of it all the things of which it is composed except the carbon and not enough to set it to blazing the desired result may be reached.

Great care has to be taken to prevent the air from getting to all parts of the heap, and fresh earth and sods are often added. A small heap of sticks will turn to charcoal in about a week. Larger heaps require two or three weeks. The holes are then all closed and the heap is left for a few days to cool off. The heap is then torn down, and the sticks are spread on the ground.—Chicago News.

To Pierce a Coin With a Needle.
To pierce a nickel with a needle, especially if the needle be a very fine one, seems a difficult, if not an insoluble, problem. It is, nevertheless, a very simple feat.

To succeed, insert a needle in a cork so that the point be just apparent, and if the needle project at the other end snap off the remainder of it with a pair of shears. Now place your nickel on a couple of wooden blocks and strike a sharp blow with a heavy hammer on the prepared cork that you have placed above it, or it will do if the nickel is simply laid upon a single block of soft wood.

The needle, being unable to bend either way, thanks to the friendly support of the cork, is forced to go one way and will pierce the nickel, or even a silver quarter, with the greatest ease; for, as we know, the steel of the needle is harder than the bronze or the silver of the coin.—Magical Experiments.
